

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

The Garden.

PASADENA, Nov. 22.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] A recent issue contains an article by "Inquirer" on "The Vegetable Business." Since coming to Southern California I have made the Chinamen and their mode of farming quite a study, and I find that their motto is "strictly business." "John's" crops are well tended and his tools well taken care of. And he has adopted the best mode of placing his wares before the people. He calls at our doors in the morning of certain days each week, and the housewife can rely upon his coming. And if my American brother wishes to compete with John for a share of the trade he must adopt the same tactics and make his daily or tri-weekly rounds with his wagon. There is not a family in Southern California who will not give an American gardener the preference in buying their vegetables if they are equal in quality, and brought to their doors, the same as John does. To a still greater number of the idea of peddling from a wagon is distasteful. Why should it be? How many merchants are there today who do not secure their trade and introduce their goods by the personal solicitation of their agents, and that agent very often one of the firm? As to prices and profits, John doesn't give his goods away, and the weekly returns from his business would keep a good-sized family well fed and clothed, and leave a balance for a rainy day. He is obliged to pay higher prices for his implements and the land he rents than an American would, and still he makes money. And there is another field of profit for the vegetable-grower—and as to the success of it I will refer my brother to two ladies who also have invested their savings in corner lots, but did not plant onions as their only crop—and that is raising vegetables for the early winter and spring market of the East. There is a colony of gardeners at Calverton, California, who people who own or rent places of five acres and upward. They not only supply the hotels of Los Angeles, but also ship in car lots to Chicago, and realize a nice profit. In order to handle their products in a business-like way, and get the best returns, they have formed among themselves a shippers' association, and elected a manager, who reviews the produce and handles the loading of the car and shipping. Among the members are the Bristol sisters, to whom I would refer all Americans who want to know how to raise garden truck profitably. Such a colony would prosper on the lands adjoining Pasadena or any other part of our glorious country. And to our grocers I would suggest that they adopt the ways of the eastern brethren and have an attractive display of fresh vegetables every morning, and in that way patronize those who deal with them. So now, instead of standing around the corner with your hands in your pockets up to your elbows calling the Chinamen dirty and wishing you had never left "cyclone" Kansas or "dry" Iowa, go to work and tackle "John" at his own game; your fellow-citizens will give you the preference. Never lay claim to being an American if you cannot successfully compete with a Chinaman in any and every branch of business. Yours respectfully, FLOWERS.

Things That I Don't Like.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 23.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] It seems to me that too many things are taken for granted here, that is, things that are not taken for granted elsewhere. One is, people who give their advertisements for nothing; if not, they place a small advertisement once and take it for granted that everybody in town will go to it. Then very few state the price of admission; some do not state the hour of commencement; others announce 7:30, but if they get started by 8:30 they are lucky. Some advertise for the W.T.B.A. or the M.T.B.S. or W.N.B.B. will give an entertainment. How are strangers to know what all these letters mean, or what is the association for that gives the show? These abbreviations and small advertisements tell visibly by the smallness of the audience and receipts. If they want the public to attend their entertainments, come out boldly—state the name of your association in large type, with full particulars; time of commencement and price of admission, and you will find the public will respond to the advertisement. But I do protest against the abbreviation of names by mere letters. To save the cost of advertising, a notice was sent to the various churches last week that there would be a mass-meeting of singers at the Congregational Church on Saturday evening, November 23d. I don't think that half-dozen persons responded to the invitation. Now, had an advertisement been published stating the object of the invitation, no doubt there would have been a good attendance.

The W.R.C. advertises a fair this week. Outside of the W.R.C. association not one person in 100 knows what W.R.C. stands for. I often see entertainments advertised to take place at the City Garden, Main-street Garden or Park Arroyo Seco; how are strangers to know where these places are, and how to get at them? There are a great many more things that might be enumerated under "What I Don't Like," but I will not trespass on your space further than to say that I am not interested in any newspaper, but would like that people who want to be successful in entertainments give the proper information through the newspapers. Several times I would have gone to entertainments, if I could have known what the charge was. Yours truly, VINCE.

Orange Culture.

ALHAMBRA, Nov. 21.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] In a letter in THE TIMES of the 20th on fruit-raising one is apt to believe, if not experienced, that fruit-raising here is played out. While certain kinds of fruit-raising do not pay, owing to lack of water, I doubt if there is any more paying farming extant than the raising of the more improved varieties of oranges, the Washington navel being foremost. There are hundreds of acres in the San Gabriel Valley suitable for their cultivation, and for sale at reasonable rates. E. J. Baldwin says that any good orange land is worth $1000 per acre, and gives figures and statistics to prove. Most of the groves planted here are seedlings, which only bring $1 per box, and while that is a good figure it certainly is to one's advantage to plant navels, which bring from $2 to $2.50 a box on the trees. There is no trouble in selling oranges; quite the opposite, for buyers compete with each other in bidding for the crops here. And now that the white scale is practically gone, our orange industry has indeed a bright future, and planting will be done with renewed vigor.

LIMES are not much cultivated here, there being little encouragement for them. There is no market for them except the bars.

FARM TOPICS.

A FARMER'S club has been organized at the Clearwater Colony.

L. G. KELLOGG, late of the Pasadena Commission-house, is starting a creamery at Clearwater.

The subject of "Planting" was discussed on Saturday by the Pasadena Club. Next Saturday it is "Planting and Pruning."

GRAIN planting is going forward now, encouraged by the abundant rains, and a fear that so good an opportunity may not come later in the season.

AMONG curiosities at the nurseries are the Litchi, or strawberry tree, from China, and the Cherimoya, or custard apple, from Japan. The former bears a small fruit, flavored like a strawberry.

The Belmont strawberry is a variety that appears just now to be superseding all others. The Park Nursery Company at Pasadena has taken up all its other varieties and replaced them with these. They are a fine market berry, stand shipping well, and of fine flavor and color.

A SINGULAR specimen of gardening is that upon Tillamook Rock, Oregon coast. All the soil for it is brought there from the main land, and it has to be protected by a wall from being blown or washed away. Their size is only 6x6 and 4x8 feet, yet on this limited space the zealous gardeners (keepers of the lighthouse there) raise all the lettuce, radishes and turnips they want, and some few carrots and squash. Surely, they deserve credit for causing blades of grass to grow where none grew before.

THE rule does not always work the same way. For instance, the rule is in California that we produce the raw material and send it abroad to be manufactured. But cotton appears to be an exception. That article we manufacture here, but do not grow it in any considerable quantity. California has cotton-mills (in Oakland), but does not grow sufficient cotton to keep them going, importing the article from Texas. The product, from many experiments, is shown to grow well here, but nobody has gone into it extensively enough to supply the mills. It looks like a promising industry for somebody. The California Cotton Mills Company at Oakland is prepared to buy all the cotton raised, either ginned or unginned, and any information respecting it may be obtained of them, or of Prof. Hilgard, at the State University, Berkeley.

FARMERS of all communities should have local clubs and talk over the affairs of the farms. These, in a sensible, practical way, are productive of much good. They exchange ideas and make better farming. But there are two or three evils to be avoided, which often break up a good club and destroy it altogether. First, have no expense attached to it, no dues or admission fee. These are a stumbling-block to many, and are the cause of many good men dropping out. There is no need of making expense in an affair of this kind; second, do not let it get too large. Oversize prevents all from being heard, and runs the talking into the hands of the few who will try to get the floor all the time to the exclusion of more sensible men who are not as glib-tongued. Third, never let it degenerate into a secret society. The business of the farm cannot be calculated to be communicated by signs and passwords, or expressed by glittering regalia, and the moment any of these become a feature of a farmers' club, that moment its usefulness is ended. This has been tried many times, and the truth of this proposition demonstrated abundantly.

THE wine crop of this State this year is placed by good judges at 14,000,000 gallons. This is not so large as it has been, and is reduced very much in amount by several causes. First, the vine disease in Southern California and the phylloxera in the northern wine localities—notably Napa and Sonoma—have very materially reduced the yield of grapes. Second, the untimely storms that prevailed in the north when the crop was about half harvested destroyed a great portion of it. This apparent evil, however, probably worked an ultimate good to the vintner, or it enhanced the value of the old crop of wine on hand to an extent that more than compensated for the loss of a portion of the crop of 1889. The industry had fallen into a bad way for prices. The wine itself was so low that it hardly paid to make it, and as a necessary consequence the price given for grapes was such as scarcely made it an object to gather them. Instead of $30 a ton, as of old, only about $8 was paid, and taking into account the reduction of yield, the acre of vineyard that five years ago paid $150 is now reduced to $20 to $25. Considering that it costs as much now as ever to cultivate it, the drawback will be seen to be tremendous. Then the wine-maker, instead of getting 20 to 30 cents a gallon for his wine by the cellar, has often sold for less than 10 cents. Aside from the cost of the grapes, his expenses are all the same as formerly. His charges for labor, machinery, supplies, interest, etc., are all the same at 8 cents a gallon as they would be at 30; and the disadvantage he labors under is apparent. Government should do everything in its power to aid him, and the Pacific Coast owes him a particular debt of gratitude. His energy, enterprise, capital and push have added millions to our wealth and tens of thousands to our population, and anything which our lawmakers can legitimately do to relieve the embarrassments under which it labors at present should be done promptly and cheerfully.

THE ORCHARD.

The time will soon come for the planting of trees, and it is none too soon to be considering the best way to do it. First is a question depending only upon location and the taste of the planter. Southern California offers a variety of capacity that includes almost the whole category of fruits, from the temperate to the tropic, and subject only to altitude and soil; a man can successfully plant what he likes. Anything from apples to oranges will find a congenial home somewhere among the infinite variety of our soils, altitudes, degrees of humidity and other conditions with which we are blessed. The man who does not yet located his orchard, to decide what he wants to raise, and then select a suitable location for it. To him who is already located, the case is a little different; he must select that to which his place is adapted.

WHERE TO PLANT

depends upon what it is. Citrus fruits want foothill country, decomposed granite soil, plenty of water for irrigation, dry climate, and a little fog as possible. The foothills from Monte Vista to Redlands appear to be the natural home of the orange in Southern California. Granite soil, because that is the natural food of the orange; plenty of water, because the roots are thirsty; dry climate and little fog, because the branches want to be kept dry for cleanliness and freedom from smut. Not what citrus fruits will grow, and with some degree of success, under different conditions, but not so satisfactorily, or with the production of as fine, clean fruit. Deciduous fruit, on the other hand, will stand heavier land and a damper climate.

SELECTION OF STOCK

Too much care cannot be taken in the selection of the stock for planting. Plant nothing but the best. Poor trees are dear at any price. The result is of too permanent a character to risk any poor stock or poor work on. When a man sets a tree he is doing it for a lifetime; therefore it should be a matter of serious consideration to do it well. Buy only of a dealer of established reputation, and get the best he has. One good tree is worth a dozen poor ones.

HOW TO PLANT

There is only one right way to plant. Dig the ground thoroughly prepared, dig big holes, and plant the tree carefully and well, in symmetrical order. The results of poor planting can never be corrected, either in crooked roots or crooked trunks, and the result will be a reproach to you as long as you live.

NOTES

Mr. CLARE reports the orange crop as good, seedlings light, but budded trees good wherever taken care of.

The Navel has an objection of not keeping well on the trees after it is ripe, of having to be quickly gathered and marketed; but, notwithstanding this, it is yet the "boss" and the bulk of the orders are for it for the coming season's planting.

A Fresno paper shows the profits from three Japanese persimmon trees to be over $2000 an acre. Certainly, good enough on a small scale. Whether it would turn out that way for an acre or more depends upon the extent of the market.

Is lemon there is nothing better than the Eureka, which are easily raised, good bearers, and of fine quality. Dr. Conger has five-year-old trees that bear this year at least four boxes to the tree, and Prof. Xoom has an orchard of only four-year-olds that are bearing nicely.

The citron is a fourth member of the citrus family that there seems a future for here. Much of it is used preserved, but none of any consequence raised. In fact, it is a little tender-sensitive to frost-but nevertheless it will grow here, and there is a big chance for an opening in it. Every grocery store sells a large quantity of it every year, and it is all imported. Some bright fruit-grower will yet distinguish himself growing it at home. It is a large fruit, something like a pomelo or large orange, and looks like an overgrown lemon.

Deciduous trees may be planted now, as soon as they can be got from the nursery, though little or nothing is yet being done about it. There seems to be the greatest run in deciduous fruit and prunes. Of figs, the White Adriatic is the choice, as being the best for drying. It wants a good soil. Of peaches, the French are preferred. They want low valley land, alluvial soil. Of plums, any good variety for canning or drying are safe to plant and will be remunerative. What particular variety will be recommended by a responsible nurseryman? Winter apples are in good demand, such as White Winter Pearmain or Belleflower. In fact, this country is developing good qualities for apples that are not suspected in its earlier days. Apples are good, and a good bearing variety will be easily recommended by a good dealer. It has been remarked that the lighter color sell for about 25 cents a pound more than the dark in the East.

The late Valencia orange ripens in July, and has no competitor at that season. Col. Dobbins and Mr. Chapman, at San Gabriel, had quite a start of them many years ago, and got extra good prices on account of the season. The white scale spoiled them, with the others, but now that that is abolished their culture is revived, and they promise to become an important part of the orange-growing profits of the season. The Porter Land and Water Company is planning a good many of them at Burbank, and Mr. Byron O. Clark, the manager of the Park Nursery Company, at Pasadena, has a promising orchard. They are good bearers, stronger growers than the Washington Navel, habit about the same as that variety. The fruit is of medium size, about twice as large as the St. Michael, light yellow in color, and with a skin as soft and fine-grained as a well-cured lemon. In their lateness they seem destined to supersede the Mediterranean Sweet, whose strong hold was as a late fruit, but which is of poor habit.

PEOPLE'S STORE.

PREPARING A GRAND ARRAY OF HOLIDAY GOODS.

The Toy Department Replete With Articles for the Children, While Their Elders are Well Provided for.

PEOPLE'S STORE.
LOS ANGELES, Nov. 28, 1890.

We are drifting rapidly toward the Holiday season, and to that end we have prepared the grandest array of possessions suitable for these festivities, unparalleled by any firm known to us.

Our Toy Department in the basement is larger than any two or three toy shops combined. Herein can be viewed the most elegant and finest toys down to the wants of the little child. In order to facilitate the little purchaser, we have arranged a series of booths in which all articles of the 5-cent denomination have been placed; the same at 10c; another booth at 15c, and one at 25c. Every article kind of toy and Holiday specialties are here to be seen.

Our Doll Toboggan Slide, wherein you will find every size, complexion and color of doll, known to the world.

By crossing through the archedway you wander into our Wheel-wagon Department. Wagons from the small 15c ones to those worth $15 are here seen. Voice boxes, bicycles, Doll Carriages, Shoolies, Door Swings; in fact, every known article manufactured can here be found.

On our first floor we have a rare collection of books, divided in three departments. Our juvenile department has been our special care. This department is located at the end of the center aisle toward the left. Our regular book department is at a usual base of the front show windows, where complete sets of all known authors are displayed. As for prices, they are always right, aiming and knowing that they are the lowest, and we never allow any one to undersell us.
